

Don't let greedy bastards buy your vote. Stand up to big money once in your life and don't sell out like Bush does to every whim of special interests. You know that XM is right in offering whatever they want to consumers and if consumers don't want it, they will simply not listen to it. What business is it of the NAB anyway? They are just looking out for their best interests and not the interests of the public at large. You however have to look out for public interest and tell the NAB to stick it where the light doesn't shine. If more government officials actually stood up for what was right instead of what was convenient or profitable, the world would be a better place. Prove me wrong in what I think of politicians in general and in the current administration in particular, DON'T SELL OUT! Uphold free speech!
